"You can't cross the sea merely by standing and staring at the water."
Rabindranath Tagore

We can't achieve your goals if you don't take a risk. We have to ride or swim if we have to. It doesn't matter what we do. What matters is that we do something. And that is how we are able to reach your destination. That is how we are able to live your dream. We all need that kind of urging at critical points in our lives when we are faced with fear and indecision, at the crossroads of the same old - same old and the new venture. Sometimes we just have to screw up our courage and take the leap of faith. If we wait for the anxiety and conflict to subside first, we will never do anything. Thinking about riding the wave, or swimming across the sea of mammoth task is necessary and helpful. But at some point, you have to just do it. Let us do it all for the sake of our better tomorrow.

Thanks and regards.
